

Not Your Garden Variety Fire: Multi-Family Fire Operations

With the quick changes in today's socioeconomic landscape and the rapid rise of suburban areas, more Americans are foregoing the white picket fence to live in multi-family dwellings. These buildings are also following today's trends in modern construction, creating hazards and operational difficulties for fire departments.

This two-hour virtual training program provides tactical insight into operations in garden-style homes – whether they be apartments, condominiums, or townhomes. Fires in these types of occupancies pose a high-life hazard and may be among the toughest fires you may confront as a modern fire department. The discussion will focus on building construction, tactics, and incident management, as well as many other important details that will make your next fire a success.
